Bio: Anthony Michael Hobbs was born April 16, 2005 in Baltimore, Maryland. The 12 year-old multi-award winning actor and filmmaker is best known for his roles as young Frederick Douglass in the 2013 Emmy Award nominated PBS Special “The American Experience: The Abolitionist” (http://video.pbs.org/video/2321796209) starring actor/director Richard Brooks (“Law & Order,” The Crow) and in the DreamWorks documentary “How to Train Your Dragon: Dragons and Dinosaurs” (http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bekKOMfsWfc), and PBS Sprout Networks’ “The Good Night Show”.

Also a multi-award winning filmmaker (writer, director, and producer), Anthony’s first short film “One Nation” was screened at 10 national film festivals spread across the United States and garnered four awards including Best Youth Filmmaker and the Spirit Award for this dedication to Filmmaker. His second film “Naga Pixie” (Imagination Lunchbox, LLC) screened at 5 film festivals and won two awards. His latest release Agent Hollywood is currently screening at film festivals, first appearing at Anthony’s own Imagination Lunchbox International Children’s Film Festival and next at the Ocean City Film Festival in Ocean City, Maryland

Hobbs is also a model and has appeared in such national print campaigns for Finish Line athletics’ chain; Philadelphia based Urban-inspired footwear chain Villa; Charles River Apparel 2015 catalogue, and for the USDA’s Healthy Kids 2011 national print campaign. He is also a stage actor who has performed in such stage plays as Kim Sykes’ “In a Roundabout Way” and Nolan Williams, Jr.’s “Christmas Gift!”

In addition, Anthony Michael is a motivational speaker who has appeared as a guest speaker for former NFL player Joel Gamble’s (Cleveland Browns, Tennessee Titans) “Joel Gamble Foundation: Career Scholars Program”, and for the Root Branch Academy’s Youth Film Festival at the Reginald F. Lewis Museum.
